Be Careful How Many Friends You Invite For Dinner. Who doesn't like the feast of the holiday season? For most it's a time of laughter, revelry and the bounty of food and drink. It's also a time when much power and other calories are consumed. So do you just give up, or do you decide to be a smart eater? Here's Menu 101 for smart holiday eating.

Tuff's Dr. Susan B. Roberts, Director of Tufts University Energy Metabolism Laboratory, says, "Faced with a six week never ending onslaught of fattening foods, you know you can't win, so you resign yourself in advance and let yourself go."

But what happens to the calorie count on holidays is shocking. For instance, Roberts says between U.S. Thanksgiving and the New Year, the typical adult American gains five to eight pounds. This amounts to eating a total of 20,000 excess calories, or daily consumption of 500 calories over what's needed to maintain normal weight. Moreover, most of these calories come from saturated fat. Bad news for those who worry about cholesterol levels.

It was refreshing that some of Roberts' suggestions were new and unique, ones I had never heard previously. For instance, if you're worried about gaining weight this holiday season, you'd better keep an eye on your water intake. Roberts' research shows that for every guest at dinner, the amount of food eaten increases by 35 calories.

Roberts adds that if you play holiday music during dinner this will add another 100 calories. Then, if after dinner you decide it's time to relax and watch a football game, add another 140 calories.

She reports further bad news. Grogginess doesn't end when the party is over. Studies show that after eating the meal to end all meals, you can expect to be hungrier and consume more at the next sitting.

Why does this happen? Roberts claims our intestinal processes speed up when we eat rich food, so the stomach empties more quickly. This means that going from one feast to another doesn't allow us to revert to normal eating habits as the stomach cries out for more food. This leads to more sugar, saturated fats, sodium and alcohol.

But the holiday season does not have to end as a nutritional disaster. One protective move is to start eating a high fiber breakfast cereal at the start of the season. This is prudent any time of the year as fiber decreases the rate at which food is absorbed and also shows that where food is absorbed in the table dates, mirrors how much you pile on your plate. So make sure the high calorie foods and the wine bottle are not near you.

You're also lucky if your dinner guests are slim. Roberts claims that short, skinny neighbours will serve themselves smaller portions and this shames you to consume smaller amounts than tall, overweight or athletic ones.

Her other suggestions tell us what common sense has told us in the past. Namely, it's wise to plan a menu that has a good portion of low-calorie fruit and vegetable dishes. Consumption is also decreased when dinner guests have less choice and variety in foods. In fact, Roberts stresses that guests find it comforting when offered a meal that doesn't make them overeat.

Are you a speed eater? If so, try to slow down and be one of the last to see your plate empty. This usually ensures you won't be tempted by a second helping. Besides, other guests will not be amused at having to wait and watch you eat "seconds".

I'm sorry to report to Dr. Roberts that I can't accept her advice and say no to mashed potatoes. I love them, but I'll use skin milk to mull them rather than load on fat and butter.

My cocktail 1/2 glass of you're not a sober drinker. But the festive demands some celebration. I'll take a glass of Chardonnay along with my mashed potatoes this holiday season.

The Seconded part of the Bannister story was pulled do to many errors and discrepancy.

Everyday People

Submitted by Sheila Boissonneault

The patrons of the Salisbury Legion will know the lady I write about this month. She can be seen working in the kitchen preparing the meal for the senior's group. She also runs the Wednesday night Bingo.

Margaret Suiberland was born in Dover, by Fox Creek, her family moved to Upper Cowville when she was six years old. She attended Salisbury School. At 16 she decided to become a hairdresser. The 56 hour week which included three nights and a half day Sunday wasn't what she wanted so she took a job at Good Neighbor Drug Store, which was in the Cowville Mall; she worked there for ten years. When Shoppers brought it out she left and went to work at Stoyles's Grocery Store and worked there for a long time.

Margaret's mother began to attend the Lion's Senior Center to do quilting and one day she went along. While there she heard that they needed someone to do the lunches for 15 people. Her mother encouraged her to apply for that job; it wasn't long before she was doing banquets for 150 people and she continued for 16 years.

Margaret retired from full time work but continued to volunteer. She started at the Legion in Salisbury helping to sell Bingo cards. She was made an honorary member of the Legion. Margaret's father served in the military and her brother was killed in the military in Second World War. He was buried overseas in Holland.

A friend and she thought that they could start a senior's group in Salisbury. First they began with quilting and lunch, then the men began to come, more and more each week until there was 100 a week enjoying quilting and card playing. When they first started they often had musical entertainment, she remembers a John Campbell who played and sang, and the seniors enjoyed it. Margaret and her friend would take turns doing the meal, a complete sit down dinner for five dollars; but it wasn't a money making project. Then her friend moved away, so Margaret took over doing the work of two, she had lots of help serving. One of the men, Lloyd Russell, a legion member, would arrive at the legion six thirty in the morning to help with the preparations for the meal. He would feed all the potatoes. After lunch they would play Bingo and finish up at two o'clock. Some people came from Petticoe and River View. There were people in their 90's that came regularly. It was nice for them to have a place to go where they could play cards or Ship Bo. Margaret baked every weekend for the seniors; they especially liked her date squares. The numbers in bingo now she says, but in the past she would use the seniors on Monday and Friday supper. She said the whole time she worked there they never had a problem, never had to call an ambulance.

Because of arthritis Margaret cannot work too much but she does what she can. She is in charge of the bingo now and she enjoys playing at one time she even won a thousand dollar jackpot. She has got to know the people that attend and if for any reason Bingo is cancelled she will call them. They appreciate that.

Margaret enjoys reading and her computer. She loves watching the birds; humming birds in the summer and pheasants in the fall. She once saw a family of pheasants, mother, father and eight little ones. Margaret would encourage seniors to keep busy, and if possible to go join other seniors at the programs offered them. She also suggest for people to visit the seniors, don't forget about them.

Subject: very clever credit card scam.

Just another reminder to keep on guard! Very clever credit card scam. (They never give up.)

Just when you thought you'd heard it all. This scam is actually over a year old. Be very careful out there! This one could easily slip by most anyone - beware of people bearing gifts. The following is a recounting of the incident from the victim:

Wednesday a week ago, I had a phone call from someone saying that he was from some outfit called "Express Couriers." The name could have been anything! He asked if I was going to be home because there was a package delivery for me that required a signature. The caller said that the delivery would arrive at my home in roughly an hour, and sure enough, about an hour later, a uniformed delivery man turned up with a beautiful basket of flowers and wine. I was very surprised since it did not involve any special occasion or holiday, and I certainly didn't expect anything like it.

I signed about a half hour later, and the gift delivery man asked me to sign the card. The delivery man's reply was, he was only delivering the gift package, but allegedly, a card was being sent separately. (The card has never arrived!) There was also a confirmation note with the gift.

He then went on to explain that because the gift contained alcohol, there was a $3.50 "delivery" verification charge, providing proof that he had actually delivered the package to an adult of legal drinking age, and not just left it on the doorstep where it could be stolen or taken by anyone, especially a minor.

This sounded logical and I offered to pay him cash. He then said that the delivery company would not be happy if I didn't pay him, and that the company was properly accounted for, and this would keep help in keeping a legal record of the transaction. He added couriers not needing to carry a bunch of cash, would make them less likely targets for robbery.

My husband, who by this time was standing beside me, pulled his wallet out of his pocket with the credit/debit card, and 'John', the 'delivery man', asked my husband to swipe his card on a small mobile card reader that I had a screen and keypad where Frank's credit card was. The card was printed out and given to us as our copy of the transaction. He then said everything was in order, and wished us good day.

To our horrible surprise, between Thursday and the following Monday, $4,000 had been charged/withdrawn from our credit/debit account at various ATM machines. It appeared that somehow the "mobile credit card machine", which the delivery man carried now had all the info necessary to create a "dummy" card with all our card details after my husband swiped our card and entered the requested PIN and security number.

Upon finding out about the illegal transactions on our card, we immediately notified the bank which issued us a new card, and our credit/debit account was closed.

We also personally went to the Police, where it was confirmed that it is definitely a scam because several households had been similarly hit.

WARNING: Be wary of accepting any "surprise gift or package", which you neither expected nor personally ordered, especially if it involves any kind of payment as a condition of receiving the gift or package. Also, never accept anything if you do not personally know or there is no proper identification of who the sender is. Above all, the only time you should give any personal credit/debit card information is to yourself.

you yourself initiated the purchase or transaction!

Pass this on, it may just prevent someone else from being swindled.

Comedy at Large

by Laurie Blanchard
Salisbury, NB

As we all know, the Mayor of a certain Canadian city has made quite a spectacle of himself. His odd behavior, his health kick to lose weight although there is a lot of luggage to be made from that. He said he was playing football as a substitute with a university team. When asked what position, he replied, "wide receiver of course!" The reporter then asked if he preferred playing on grass or artificial turf. The reply, I'm not sure, I've never tried smoking artificial turf!

Here is a little poem of royalty in somewhat of an embarrassing moment---

I sat down with the duchess at tea,
I was afraid that's just how it would be,
Her rumbling abdominal
Was absolutely phenomenal,
And everyone thought it was me! 'peww !

A young lad apparently called his friend at the wrong time. Johnny can't come to the phone, said his sister Suzie. He's getting ready for school. He's sitting at the table eating his fruit loops, my sister is under the table putting on his shoes. Dad is combing his hair, Momma is fastening his shirt. Grandma is packing his book bag and I gotta let you go and open the front door cause the school bus is coming! Now that's busy!

Words you will never hear ...
Pass me that bulldozer.
Do what you want with the girl, but leave me alone.
I have complete trust in that politician.
Don't cook me any supper cause you'll dirty the pots, pans and dishes.
Try this welding torch on my arm to see how much it hurts.
I'm gonna roll over in that mud puddle cause I don't like looking clean.

Living In & Learning About Salisbury

Well Salisbury is the place for you. There is a lot of things do to if you live in Salisbury. You can go for wheeling or dirt biking or even walk along the trail. There is a really good bike park it doesn't matter if you're a pro at biking or if you're just starting it's the place to go and practice your skills and get better. There is a police station and a fire department. There are lots of grocery stores and a lot of different stores and gas stations. You can go to the Green pig or go to the Corn Maze. If it is a hot day during the summer why don't you walk or drive down to the Dairy Depot. Dairy Depot is an ice cream store that is in walking distance from the school. These are a few reasons why Salisbury is a good place to live. Jeremy

Looking for a new place to live? How about a small town just outside of the crowded city? A place where it's quieter and people are friendlier? I suggest you look up Salisbury. I just barely moved to Salisbury but, I already love it here. I find its way better than the city because there is less people and tons of fun things to do. You could go to the Green Pig Market, they have a corn maze and a great market that has fresh vegetables. Salisbury has one of the best pizza places in Canada. Pizza Mill. We also have walking and four-wheeling trails. There are tons of beautiful green parks too. Salisbury is an incredible place to live. So give Salisbury a try! By: Halice Hunter
